DIXIE SOLDIERS ASK RATIFICATION

Robinson and Harrison Assert Adoption Without Change Is Essential.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Early ratification by the senate of the peace treaty and its league of nations covenant without reservations were declared to be essential to both the present and future security of the world by Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, and Harrison, of Mississippi, speaking here last night at the Trinity church club forum.

Adoption of any modifying reservations by the senate, Senator Robinson declared, would constitute amendment of the treaty and compel re-opening of negotiations. This he said would be "calamitous" because every other nation, including Germany, would then insist upon its own reservations, and the "return of peace would be indefinitely deferred."

Touching upon the status of Ireland under the proposed league of nations, Senator Robinson declared the league would improve Ireland's opportunity for securing independence. Ireland, he said, would lose no advantage, he said, because without the league there is "no probability that any nation will attack England for the purpose of freeing Ireland."

Senator Harrison declared unreserved ratification of the league of nations covenant was necessary to "insure the fruits of victory, to insure the safety of the world and the preservation of organized government." Failure of ratification by the senate, he said, would be a "source of anxiety and spread a blanket of sadness over the world."

COST OF SHOES MORE THAN EVER, SAY DEALERS

Local shoe dealers, in both the wholesale and retail trade, are in the position of the old-time politician who always "viewed with alarm" the change of the political party with which he was not affiliated. The shoe dealers are viewing with alarm the reports of a shortage of hides, and the steady advance in price of leather.

One wholesale merchant, basing the cost on the quoted price in Boston during the present week of $2 a square foot for calfskin, the dealer estimated that the cost to manufacture such shoes now is between $11 and $12 at the factory. To that must be added the cost of selling, and the retailers' profits.

A traveling salesman for a big Chicago wholesale shoe house, while chatting at one of the stores, estimated that the best men's shoes are made, figured that the cost to manufacture such shoes now is between $11 and $12 at the factory. To that must be added the cost of selling, and the retailers' profits.

"Retailers, in selling fancy styles, generally figure on a profit of 50 per cent," he said, "for if the style change they have to sell their remaining stock at a loss. If ordinary shoes cost $13.25, ultra styles will be at least $2 more. You can't figure any way that shoes will be cheap next fall and winter."

An editorial in the current issue of the Shoe and Leather Reporter states that while stocks of beef and other meats are larger than for years in the hands of the packers, the stock of hides is far short of actual requirements and from those facts, estimates that meat should soon be cheaper but that leather will be much higher. It appears that the consumer with a large family certainly will be out of luck next fall in any event.

No Worms in a Healthy Child

All children troubled with worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule there is more or less stomach disturbance. GIBBY'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the appetite, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off on its own the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

PRIVATE SEWER BAD

H. F. McDonald and L. B. Harris late were in chancery court against the county of Shelby and the Cudahy Packing company, seeking to abandon an ordinance asking for compensation for damages growing out of a charge that the defendants are maintaining through their farm property a drain pipe which emits offensive odors.

The drain pipe, they say, extends from the workhouse through their farm to the river and declares they have reason to believe the county controlling the drain has allowed the packing company to tap same and carry off its refuse. J. B. Webb is attorney for complainants.

CUPID FELL DOWN

Suit for divorce was filed late Wednesday in the circuit court by Fannie Graves Price against Jack Price, through her attorney, J. L. Martin. Mrs. Price declares complainant beat her, cursed and abused her, abandoned her and has not contributed to her support since August, 1918. They were married, she says, in March, 1900.

MEN ARRESTED ON STILL CHARGE WANT LIBERTY

COLUMBUS, Miss., July 21. (Sp.)—No warrants have been executed against Wilson Partain and William Crosby, the two white men who were arrested several days ago on the charge of being connected with a still near Caladonia, in the northeastern section of the county, by revenue officers.

Attorney E. E. Callaway, who has been engaged to represent them, states that he is preparing to institute habeas corpus proceedings with the view of securing their release. The arrests were made by J. La Rue and J. L. Boyd, revenue agents, with headquarters in New Orleans, and they turned their prisoners over to the local police, requesting that they be held until warrants were executed against them. The revenue men stated that they were going to Aberdeen, Miss., the federal headquarters for the eastern district of the northern division of Mississippi, for the purpose of securing these warrants, but although several days have elapsed nothing has been heard from them, and the two prisoners, who both protest that they are innocent, are exceedingly anxious to regain their freedom.

Partain and Crosby were implicated by William Blevins, a negro who was found at the still when the raid was made and who was also placed under arrest. The still was an unusually large one, being of 60-gallon capacity, and the officers also found 1,400 gallons of mash and a small quantity of corn whiskey.

"O. Henry and Al Jennings"

Thrilling Story of Two Men Who Had Most Spectacular Careers of Crime, Served Time and Came Back to Distinguished and Useful Careers.

(Copyright by Al Jennings, 1919.)

CHAPTER VII
Houston and Love free!

The thing I had been dreading and expecting for six months came now with a shock that sent a cold fury of resolution through me. I knew that I would have to deliberately what I should have done in passion.

It was not blood-lust, but raging vindictive hate that spurred me on the five-mile ride to my father's house.

The hoofbeats stopping at his door aroused him. When he saw me, he stood as one petrified.

"Lo, your honor!" I put out my hand. "I have come to see you."

"What have you been doing? Never had I seen his eye so cold, so hostile. What does this mean?" He reached into his pocket and took a folded handbill and opened it for me to read.

"Reward for the apprehension of Al Jennings," it said, "wanted for the robbery of the Santa Fe express."

I saw it in a moment. This was the work of Houston and Love. They would get me out of the way. They would save their cringing hides by abandoning me to the law.

"I had nothing to do with it. I'm damn sorry I didn't—I hurled the words at my father. Anger caught me by the throat and was choking me. Damned if I had anything to do with it. By hell, they'll pay for it."

and Bob coming toward us. They didn't say a word. We started back quietly. I began to wonder what it was all about. Didn't get a bean?" I ventured. Andy caught my arm.

"Hell, yes, we went into the express," he said. "We got a little bundle."

(To Be Continued.)

Appeal Becomes Command

"If you had nothing to do with it, give up and clear yourself. That's the way to make them pay."

One of those sudden shifts from command to appeal softened my father's face. "Do you want to bring disgrace on the name?" he asked.

"The name be damned and the law and everything connected with it. I hate it."

"If you don't come in and clear yourself, I finished with you," I told him. "I can't clear myself," I told him. "The Harless range harbors outlaws. I'm not here to prove my father's name. Harless wasn't there at the time. If I did give up, I couldn't establish my innocence."

"Then you're guilty?"

"Not in all the lawlessness of my early life, not in the frenzy of sorrow and revenge after the murder, had such a full tide of storming violence beaten down to suppress my father's name. I was distracted by what had I to expect from enemies?"

I went out from my father's house, lashed with desperate, unappeasable fury. I wanted something to happen that once and for all would put me beyond the pale.

I slept out on the range and the next morning rode toward Arboke. I had eaten nothing the day before. On the public road through the timber on the old trail west from Fort Smith was a little country store. I could have carried off its contents in my sacker.

Five men were lounging on the bench near the horse rack when I threw my bridle over the pole. Their horses whined. I couldn't tell whether they were marshals or horse thieves from the look of them. Whatever difference there is favors the horse thief.

I bought some cheese and crackers. When I came out my horse was gone.

Horse Turned Loose

"Where's my horse?" The fellow felt the hot blast of anger in the bridge. "Ran away," he answered.

"Ran?" I snapped at him. "Some of you fellows turned him loose."

In the glade about 15 yards distant, I saw my horse nibbling grass. A ran down, mounted and was just galloping off when a shot whizzed past, then a crash, a volley and the next moment the mare lunged sideways and thumped to the ground pinning my leg under her.

I leaped up and the next moment they were five to one and they didn't even try to take me on the porch. They fired without calling for a surrender. It was better to get a suspected train-rober dead than alive. The question of guilt and the surety of reward were then settled beyond dispute.

I pulled myself free, started firing like a man, and saw two of them drop. I hid behind a tree, plugged up again and went for the porch, shooting as I went. Two of them ran into the timber.

As I got to the store the fifth tumbled over into the brush. I ran inside, took an ax and smashed the place to pieces. The owner crawled out from behind an empty older barrel. He looked like a bearded rat with his gray hair puffing out above his parted black whiskers. I didn't care what did. The viciousness of their attack infuriated me. I boasted one at him as he slid off the porch.

The drawer in the counter was open. There was $27.50 in it. I took it. I needed no money but the theft filled me with happiness. I had taken a definite step. I was a criminal now. My choice was made. I was one with the outlaws. For the first time since Ed's death, I felt at peace. I knew that I would have a gang with me now to the end.

The big iron gray horse that had stood unflinching during the rucus, I mounted and started back to the Harless ranch. My foot was slipping up and down in the mud.

The shoe was filled with blood. One of the bullets had struck through the muscles above my ankle. I picked it out with my pen knife and stuffed the hole with a puff ball wad.

I was limping severely. I did not stop at the house, but made for the cover in the timber. As I came near a cloud of fear shot through me. It was long past midnight, but they had a fire blazing. One of the men raised stealthily and glanced toward me.

He nodded.

Elation Ends

The sudden elation at the store was dissipated. Should I go on? Could I rely on these men? I no longer felt at ease with them. Should I tell them what had happened? The silence of the fugitive is libred. The reserve of the savage is his armor. Innocent, I had trusted the outlaws; guiltily, I doubted their loyalty.

"Hello," Andy called.

"I'm coming over," I answered, guiding my horse into the deep stream.

"Want some coffee?" Jake asked. "I robbed the damned store." They asked no questions.

"Looks like you got snagged," Bill offered.

"Got shot. They tried to kill me. Soaked my horse full of lead. They beat me. I robbed the damned store."

"Want some coffee?" Jake asked. "I robbed the damned store." They asked no questions.

"Looks like you got snagged," Bill offered.

"Got shot. They tried to kill me. Soaked my horse full of lead. They beat me. I robbed the damned store."

"Reckon you're with us," I said.

Andy settled it.

"I'm coming over," I answered, guiding my horse into the deep stream.
